Headquartered in Chicago, Andrea A. Raila & Associates, Inc. has for over 18 years provided consulting services that address the property tax appeal needs of all types of property owners.

Andrea Raila was a case decision maker under Commissioner Pat Quinn at the Cook County Board of Review. Raila helped start the City of Chicago's first Taxpayer's Advocate Office—an agency that assists small property owner's understand and appeal their property tax assessments.

Raila is a widely recognized property tax expert and successful advocate for property owners, a presenter at self-help property tax appeal workshops around Cook County, and is an author of numerous real estate and tax appeal articles.

Her interest in achieving an accurate, equitable and accessible property tax assessment and appeal system would lessen the need for tax lawyers and consultants to process appeals in Cook County, a taxing body that generates the highest number of tax appeals in the nation.

"The Illinois revenue system has become a beast without a master. We need leadership to make critical systemic reforms to get the beast under control. Incremental changes will not support a statewide need to overhaul a broken system."
